Who I Am:

- Interested in history, macroeconomics, political economy, technological change, and finance.
- Associate Professor in the Department of Economics of the University of California at Berkeley.
- Formerly Deputy Assistant Secretary of the Treasury for Economic Policy: see what I did in Washington.
- A Research Associate of the National Bureau of Economic Research.
- A Research Fellow of the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation.
- A Visiting Scholar at the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco.

What's in This Website:

- My Writings: Including almost all of my economics articles (many of them in Adobe's .pdf format). There are shorter, occasional pieces: op-eds, comments, and book reviews. I am working on a book about the economic history of the twentieth century: Slouching Towards Utopia.
- My Career: Including an .html version of my resume and my one page biography. Conferences that I have attended or will attend.
- Of Special Interest: My essay on my own cognitive confusion here at the dawn of the computer age: The Shock of the Virtual.. My guess as to what the stock market will do; An alternative version that was just published in Slate. My brother Chris De Long, my friend Sherman Robinson, and I wrote an article on the Mexican peso crisis.
- U.S. Politics: Including a short assessment of the relative success of Clinton-Administration economic policy and a brief account of what I did in Washington.

- Teaching: In the fall of 1996 I taught:
 - Business Administration 130 (Introduction to Finance)
 - Economics 101b, but its webpage for fall 1996 never got implemented.
 - Economics 115 (Twentieth Century Economic History).I put a lot of work into the website for my spring 1996 undergraduate macroeconomics course, Econ 100b.
Jeff Zax's essay on being a section leader must be read by all section leaders (and by all who have section leaders)
- Ongoing Projects: Including an in-progress study of America's billionaires, and a survey of the economic prospects of the Pacific Rim.
- Links: To places in the web and to people I find interesting, including my favorite search engine, Digital's Alta Vista.
- In Praise of Economists: Including an article in praise of the Berkeley Economics Department. Gene Sperling is not an economist (he's a politician) but he deserves to be praised anyway. And John Maynard Keynes deserves a webpage of his very own.
- Website Logistics: Including site administration and other private files (that's right: private) but including an open public page on the hardware and software used to create this website and a page on the abjuration of Galileo.
- Website Views: In addition to this home page, a page of files of special interest, and a page that lists the files in this website, and a page of newly-created files.

Office Hours:

- Tuesday, 9:30-11:00 AM Evans 601 (during the semester; not guaranteed otherwise; call or e-mail to be sure that I will be there)
- By appointment (send email to delong@econ.berkeley.edu or phone (510) 643-4027)
- In the spring of 1997 I will be picking up the threads of my research; advising graduate students; serving on a host of committees; and advising undergraduate theses.

Fine Print:

Format: Many of the documents in this website are not directly viewable text, but are Acrobat .pdf files which require the "Acrobat Reader" program or plug-in, which you can download for free from Adobe. The use of .pdf files (instead of translating everything into .html, or using .ps.Z) may be a mistake: but .pdf virtual print drivers are better than programs that convert to .html; and I hope that by early 1996 .pdf reader plug-ins will be standard in nearly all WWW browsers.

Fair Use: This website provides you with an automated way to request individual copies of things I have written. Advantages on my side are (a) no hassle in sending it to you, and (b) no hassle in getting you to return the item when you are done--"return" is automatically performed when you clean up your temporary directory. The advantage on your side is that you get it quickly.

If you want to permanently keep a copy of anything you download from the items below, please be guided by the standard "fair use" principles (especially should you want to xerox anything for wider distribution). In cases where I hold copyright I am happy to allow you to redistribute, and even to charge to cover the costs of redistribution, subject only to the proviso that you provide a pointer back to this website and do not make lots and lots of money in the process.

However, I do not hold copyright in many cases. Documents here are copyright their respective holders.

In addition, please recognize that the computer files archived in this website are in many cases not identical to the published works, but are somewhat earlier drafts.
